THURSDAY MORNING, APRIL 25, 1861. REMARKS OF MAYOR BROWN, OF BALTI

MURE Mayer Brown advanced to the iron railing enclosing the yard and was boisterously electrical. Speaking under great, though restrained excitement, and with evident eme- quality; Pure Brandy and Port Wine, bottled extich, he said in effect, that he was now pre- pressly for medicinal uso. pared to give an account of his part in this day's doings. He had tried to preserve human liteat some personal risk; but of that he would not speak. He had not only endeavored, under a sense of duty, to preserve the lives of strangers, but of our own citizens as well. He trusted that, despite the terribly exciting scenes of the day the law abiding citizens of Baltimore would prove to the people of the country that the peace should he here preserved inviolate, in the midst of the strongest provocation to violence.

The confusion and cheering became so violent at this point of the Mayor's address that he was compelled to request that order required. Catalogues gratis. For sale by might be kent if they would hear him.]

might be kept if they would hear him. Hear me for my cause, fellow-citizens, he continued, and be quiet that you may hear me. I am desireus of being heard now, for I do not wish my position to be misunderstood by a single one of my fellow-citizens.

No man more than himself deplored the unhappy occurrences of to-day, but he was e instrained to say, in self-vindication, that while disagreeing entirely with the spirit return mail. We have a full supply of all, the and the chiect of the President's call for volunteers, [vociferous and long-continued cheering,] yet not withstanding that, knowing that Maryland was yet a member of the United States, and that these troops had been regularly summoned to the national capital, he had felt it his duty to protect them at the risk of his life. [A storm of grosss.]

Since the deplorable outbreak of to-day, he nil they could to prevent further insult to Golden Japan Winter Squash, &c., &c. Maryland, and the further effusion of blood. Both Governor Hicks and himself had telegraphed to the President of the United States to sead on more troops through Baltimore .-[Cheers.] They had also telegraphed to the Presidents of several Northern roads to the same effect. This despatch had elicited from the President of the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore road a response, the purport of which was that he had directed the troops yet at the Baltimore station to be reconveyed to Philadelphia, and that no solthers should hereafter be sent over the road without the advice and consent of the Mayor and Governor. [Cheers.]

The speaker conjured his hearers to reriemper that in the perfect preservation of peace the honor of Baltimore was at stake. for sale by He assured them that their civic authorities would take full measures for the protection of the city against a repetition of to-day's occurrence. He invoked men of all parties -should differences of opinion unhappily continue to exist after to-day-to sustain their Mayor. [Voices: "We will," and great

The Mayor further said he felt authorized: to say that Governor-Hicks feit as did the speaker and as did his hearers upon the one Maryland to consider. [A scene of wild Rhubark; Donovan's Syrup of Bark; Laudanum; confusion and of noisy enthusiasm here ensaid, continuing for several minutes.]

We all feel and know, as we trust the peuple of the North will soon feel and know, that it is the height of madness or of folly for one portion of this country to attempt to subjugate the other [Great cheering.] The erl frever! - [Wild cheering, long contin- | ceived and for sale by Dr. R. H. STABLER, well. If beither section will yield then, in late."] The speaker continuing, asked for order and silence that he might proceed. Mr. Chase, he said, does not believe in the doctrine of secession, and neither did he (the speaker.) [Three greans called for, and given vigorously.] He was not alraid of goons, he said, nor could he be deterred by them from doing what he thought was right. | Three cheers were called for "Secession" and given, intermingled with hisses and grouns. The Mayor repeated that he did not beunce, he was for revolution, and not till then. [Cheers for "Brown."]

Resuming the thread of his speech, Mayor Brown said that Secretary Chase had told him that, though he opposed the right of secession, yet when independent and powerfel States had gone out of the Union, and were determined not to return, he was for telling them to go in peace. [Expressions of "Lah!" and "Who cares for Chase?"]

The Mayor thanked the citizens for the respect they had shown him, and acknowledged that he had fears that when the blood of the community was at passion heat, when hostile banners were floated in angry defiance, and when the roar of hostile muskots had been heard in the streets, civil war would have been the fatal consequence, but he had been most happily reassured, by the Maryland. | Cheers.

Robert Tyler, Esq., a native of Virginia and a sen of Ex-President Tyler, but for many years a citizen of Pennsylvania, has l published a letter. He says:

"Now, let me say that the opinions I entertain are those of a State-rights Democrat .--I have entertained and expressed these opinions for filteen or twenty years past. These opinions do not make me disloyal to the State of Pennsylvania. I claim to be as true a Pennsylvanian in my allegiance as any other man in the Commonwealth, no matter who hat other may be. I have received direct from the importer, and for sale by never belonged to any political body of any description, except the Democratic party .-I have never violated any law or invaded may man's rights, and do not intend to do La supply just received, and for sale by so. While I live in Pennsylvania, I shall never taise my hand against the State or the flag she shall follow. I claim the same right to enjoy my opinions which is accorded to every citizen of this Commonwealth."
